COMES NOW, the plaintiffs, DANIEL R. WAGNER, LLOYD L. LOFTON, III, and JOSHUA DILLON BATES, and for their causes of action state as follows:

INTRODUCTION

1. This is a civil action for monetary damages based upon Defendants' blatant failure to stop an Iowa Department of Revenue employee – Defendant Kerr – from using his cell phone to surreptitiously record and photograph each Plaintiff, on separate occasions, while they were using the toilet in a public restroom at their place of employment. On each occasion, the Plaintiffs were in a state of partial nudity and did not know of, or consent to, being videoed, photographed or filmed. Defendants tolerated Defendant Kerr's conduct, allowing him to fulfill his disturbing sexual fantasies. Plaintiffs believe the evidence in this case will demonstrate that Defendants tolerated Defendant Kerr's unwanted, hostile, harassing, disturbing and disruptive behavior, and created an environment fraught with harassment and abuse—a place where state employees could mock, scrutinize, laugh at, and make fun of Plaintiffs as a result of being victims to Defendant Kerr's behavior.

ALLEGATIONS COMMON TO ALL COUNTS

Plaintiff Daniel Wagner

18. Between March 1997 and July 2015, Defendant Kerr engaged in unwarranted, unwanted, hostile, harassing, disturbing and disruptive behavior towards Mr. Wagner during, after, and before work.

19. For example, Defendant Kerr stalked Plaintiff Wagner on a daily basis from March 1997 through July 2015: Defendant Kerr followed Plaintiff Wagner multiple times per day into the restroom at the Department of Revenue; Defendant Kerr followed Plaintiff Wagner to his son's baseball games; Defendant Kerr followed Plaintiff Wagner to the golf course; Defendant Kerr followed Plaintiff Wagner to his home; and Defendant Kerr consistently waited for Plaintiff Wagner in the parking lot before, after, and during work.

20. Defendant Kerr's actions were intended to harass Plaintiff Wagner.

21. In addition to stalking Plaintiff Wagner, Defendant Kerr used his cell phone with a video camera function to surreptitiously record Plaintiff Wagner using the toilet in a public restroom at his place of employment. Plaintiff Wagner was in a state of partial nudity at the time of the recording and did not know of, or consent to, being videoed, photographed, or filmed.

22. Defendant Kerr also attempted to, or did, surreptitiously take photos of Plaintiff's genital area at a work luncheon.

23. From March 1997 through July 2015, Plaintiff Wagner complained to his supervisors, including Mathis, on multiple occasions about Defendant Kerr's unwarranted, hostile, harassing, disturbing, and disruptive behavior. IDR's supervisors and managers knew or should have known of Mr. Kerr's behavior yet took no discernable action to prevent future recurrences of these behaviors. For example, in 2012, Plaintiff Wagner's supervisor – Betty Mathis – informed Plaintiff Wagner that Defendant Kerr was surreptitiously taking photographs of him under the lunch table. In 2014, Plaintiff Wagner's supervisor – Paul Benson – informed Plaintiff Wagner on a daily basis that Plaintiff Wagner's "stalker," meaning Defendant Kerr, was watching Plaintiff Wagner. Plaintiff Wagner also informed his supervisor, Sam Hoerr, of Defendant Kerr's behaviors as soon as Mr. Hoerr became his supervisor in early 2015.

E-FILED 2017 JUL 19 8:04 PM POLK - CLERK OF DISTRICT COURT

24. Despite Plaintiff Wagner's multiple complaints to various IDR supervisors, Plaintiff's complaints continued to be ignored.

25. Because Plaintiff Wagner's complaints to his supervisors were being ignored, Plaintiff Wagner also asked Defendant Kerr to stop his behavior on multiple occasions. Despite Plaintiff Wagner's requests, Defendant Kerr's behaviors did not stop.

26. Following the incidents described above, an IDR employee – Megan Richmond (married name unknown) – disclosed to several other IDR employees, private and confidential information related to Defendant Kerr's behavior towards his victims, including Plaintiff Wagner, and information related to the photographs and recordings taken by Defendant Kerr. Such information included entries from a diary kept by Defendant Kerr, which contained graphic details of Defendant Kerr's harassment of Plaintiff Wagner, his repeated efforts to stalk Plaintiff Wagner, and his disturbing sexual fantasies about Plaintiff Wagner.

27. From March 1997 through the present, Defendants State of Iowa, Kay-Decker, and Mathis have allowed IDR employees to continue to mock, scrutinize, laugh at, and make fun of Plaintiff Wagner as a result of being a victim of Defendant Kerr's behavior.

28. Defendants State of Iowa and Kay-Decker have also continued to jeopardize and invade the privacy of IDR employees by allowing the male restrooms of the Iowa Department of Revenue to be a place where peepholes in the bathroom stalls are acceptable and a place where females can walk in unannounced.

29. As a result of the conduct of Defendants, Plaintiff Wagner has suffered, and continues to suffer, emotional and mental distress, humiliation, embarrassment, and reduction in the ability to enjoy life, work and family interactions.

Plaintiff Lloyd Lofton, III

30. The inaction of Defendant State of Iowa and its supervisors, including Defendant Kay-Decker and Mathis, put other employees at risk of becoming a victim of Defendant Kerr's behavior.

31. In July 2015, Defendant Kerr used his cell phone with a video camera function to surreptitiously record and/or photograph Plaintiff Lofton using the toilet in a public restroom at his place of employment. Plaintiff Lofton was in a state of partial nudity at the time of the recording and did not know of, or consent to, being videoed, photographed, or filmed.

32. Following the incident described above, an IDR employee – Megan Richmond (married name unknown) – disclosed to several other IDR employees, private and confidential information related to Defendant Kerr's behavior towards his victims, including Plaintiff Lofton, and information related to the photographs and recordings taken by Defendant Kerr. Such information included entries from a diary kept by Defendant Kerr, which contained graphic details of Defendant Kerr's harassment of Plaintiff Lofton.

33. From January 2015 to the present, Defendants State of Iowa, Kay-Decker, and Mathis have allowed IDR employees, including Plaintiff Lofton's direct supervisor, Scott Lockwood, to mock, scrutinize, laugh at, and make fun of Plaintiff Lofton as a result of being a victim of Mr. Kerr's behavior.

34. Defendants State of Iowa and Kay-Decker have also continued to jeopardize and invade the privacy of their employees by allowing the male restrooms of the Iowa Department of Revenue to be a place where peepholes in the bathroom stalls are acceptable and a place where females can walk in unannounced.

35. As a result of the conduct of Defendants, Plaintiff Lofton has suffered, and continues to suffer, emotional and mental distress, humiliation, embarrassment, and reduction in the ability to enjoy life, work and family interactions.

Plaintiff Joshua Bates

36. The inaction of Defendant State of Iowa and its supervisors, including Defendant Kay-Decker and Mathis, put other employees at risk of becoming a victim of Defendant Kerr's behavior.

37. During Plaintiff Bates' employment at IDR, Defendant Kerr used his cell phone with a video camera function to surreptitiously record and/or photograph Mr. Bates using the toilet in a public restroom at his place of employment. Plaintiff Bates was in a state of partial nudity at the time of the recording and did not know of, or consent to, being videoed, photographed, or filmed.

38. Following the incident described above, an IDR employee – Megan Richmond (married name unknown) – disclosed to several other IDR employees private and confidential information related to Defendant Kerr's behavior towards his victims, including Plaintiff Bates, and information related to the photographs and recordings taken by Defendant Kerr. Such information included entries from a diary kept by Defendant Kerr, which contained graphic details of Defendant Kerr's harassment of Plaintiff Bates.

39. As a result of the conduct of Defendants, Plaintiff Bates has suffered, and continues to suffer, emotional and mental distress, humiliation, embarrassment, and reduction in the ability to enjoy life, work and family interactions.
